

Iâ€™m FALLLLING!

Description

This post is will be the one that started it for me. Iâ€™ve been reading blogs for about 6 months now and have decided to join the ranks of the pajamahadeen. More on the logic behind that to come with time, but it has at its core the desire to let the main stream media (herinafter refered to as MSM) and their blind supporters know there are plenty of thinking, knowledgeable people out here, who did not choose to wear a press pass for their chosen career. Not all of these people had to go through a higher education institution to get their smarts, either.

They employ experts all the time, and, while Iâ€™m thinking of it, they actually pay them for their commentary. Look at all the talking heads they had who used to wear a uniform for the Gulf War and the War on Terror? In the land of the cyber-expert, it seems plenty of people did some tremendously detailed research, all free of charge for the MSM, and their idea of thanks was to tell the world that people who sit at home and type in their pajamas canâ€™t be taken seriously.

If I had the free money, Iâ€™d sure pay plenty for some not-photoshopped pictures of the major luminaries of the press corps typing at home on their laptops in their PJs!

Comments?

I feel like Iâ€™m running out the back of a Super Casa at 15,000 ft. Iâ€™m now falling into the cyber-atmosphere, but I packed a chute, it will be OK.

Category

1. Blogging

Date Created

September 26, 2004

Author

admin