

Breakfast and History?

Description

How better to begin a day, than to be invited to a long standing group of mostly Naval Aviators, and some Marines, who span military history from 1942 to the mid-90s (I was the youngest one and moved that goal post)?

Via business networking and meeting and doing business with told me to show up for breakfast. I didn't get all the names right, I'm sure, but a Navy Cross winner, a retired Admiral who went downtown. The man with the most CUTLASS traps every. A P-3 pilot who was one of my CO's roommates at USNA, and we had met at the change of command, and figured out he and I had crossed paths in Dec 76 @ Comm School in Newport. And that's not all the history I sat in the middle of, but, I was the lone Shoe, and non-USNA. They still welcomed me in and told me to come back. They do this every two weeks.

More later. Much more I'm sure. maybe an interview from a Cutlass pilot.

Category

1. "Sea Stories"
2. Blogging
3. Marines
4. Military
5. Military History
6. Navy

Tags

1. History
2. Military History
3. naval history
4. saturday morning breakfast history

Date Created

August 29, 2009

Author

admin