The Day has Arrived â€“ April 4th, 2006

Description

Every since the introduction of Mac OS 10, I predicted the day would come when the morning headline, above the fold, in large print, would read:

â€œMAC RUNS EVERYTHINGâ€•

The day was 4/4/2006, and itâ€™s been a long time coming. The OS 10 operating system, being built on a UNIX base, runs UNIX programs. It (obviously) runs Mac programs, (which is an interesting story about backwards compatability the Apple always supported â€“ but thatâ€™s another post). Now, with the Intel based Mac computers, Boot Camp (oh, btw, a free beta!)â€¦â€•weâ€• have arrived.

A pox on the houses of all of you die hard, brainwashed PC-ites, who, having never laid a hand on the mouse of a Mac, could, with a straight face, tell me â€œMacs are no good!â€•

The same to you who proclaimed â€œWe have 25,000 programs, you only have 2,500!â€• Now we own all of yours and all of oursâ€¦.

One comment (as Chapomatic likes to say): Heh!

Yep, I have a PC now, but youâ€™ll have to wait until Oct this year before I lay out my hobby equipment â€œownershipâ€• post.

And if you think itâ€™s no big news, check Appleâ€™s stock. As of a few mintues ago, it had gone from $60 (yesterday) to $71 today. The Dow is presently â€œtaking a dumpâ€• my investor friend tells meâ€¦.hmmmmmmmâ€¦..

Update: 4/7/2006: The 2 Steves Who Changed the World from CNN. How trueâ€¦
