What to do About Islamic Rageâ€¦.

Description

I donâ€™t know, but I sure wish I did. Today, more â€œif you say we are violent, we will kill youâ€• mentality from the Religion of Peace:

â€œPakistanis protest, cleric says Pope should be crucifiedâ€•.

Kool. I guess they sort of like some of the story of Jesus Christ.

In the face of the â€œrage riotsâ€• (Iâ€™m claiming this term!), I canâ€™t for the life of me, figure why some people still insist it was a bad thing to put our treasure into spreading democracy. We had the stampedes that killed Muslims over the penning, by cartoonists, of likenesses of â€œThe Prophet.â€• Cars burned by the hundreds during night riots in Paris and other parts of France. Muslims terrorists causing mass confussion during the hajj, where Muslims on their holy pilgrimage then, in the effort to save themselves, killed themselves. Those are but a few moments of insanity that show they are using very flawed tactics if the plan of the greater strategy is to take over the world.

It seems to me, in a democratic (well, actually, a representative republic) society, we just call each other bad names in the publically used news sources, as a way to voice our displeasure. I would think those not in power around the world, would cheer the onset of this style of government, for it certainly would increase their life expectancy. On the other hand, modern psychology points out battered wives return and average of 3-4 times, before they leave for good. Sad, but true fact of accepting the attitude of victimhood. Iâ€™m speculating there is much of this in some of the very countries who riot to see us die, claiming the right to attack the US based on what the southern Europeans began 600+ years ago (when the US did not exist, and before Colombus set out sailing West to the unknown), as they saw the choice was to die, or not go quietly into the night and the pages of history (that likely would never have been written if the crusades of the faithful Muslim warriors had succeeded at the beginning.

Also, it seems thre is a new job skill out there in the professional arena, where itâ€™s easy to muster up workers for a multi day â€œrage riotâ€• series. I wonder if anyone has already trademarkled â€œRent-a-Riot?â€• Several poitns of discussion spawn from this, such as: Is it just the unemployment rate is too high in those countries? orâ€¦does it pay well enough for the few days, that you can subsist off the proceeds in the time between going out to risk a rubber bullet in the chops, or large concentration of CS gas? Do you get a bonus for places where the police are more agressive and actuarial tables predict violence will come your way more often?

I guess if I dug around the net, I might find the PD for the Operations staff for â€œRent-a-Riotâ€• International. It seems like that would be a fairly stable position in the long term (or until the 12th Imam arrives to the sounds of nuclear weapon detonations).

So what is the long term legacy of the Muslim faith? The Pope saw it, throught the eyes of men of the past, who struggled as we are, with those who would take up the sword (dull knife) to force conversion.

Just thinkingâ€¦.
