Revisiting Tet: A Chance to Do It Right â€“ Follow Up

Description

A few days ago, as the mediaâ€™bâ€™Allah was full of printed â€˜shoutsâ€™ of â€œTet! TET! TEEETTTT!!!!!,â€• I posted some of my thoughts on the similarities and differences of the analogy of the Tet Offensive in Vietnam and the War on Terror now. David of Third World County added to the analysis on his blog.

This morning, while scanning Town Hall, I came across this editorial from someone who comprehends the issue far better than I ever will, LtCol. Oliver North, USMC (Ret).

He was on the ground in that war, as an Marine Officer in an infantry company. I was still in High School, but we see the issue form a common view point:

default watermark

> The war in Vietnam wasnâ€™t lost during â€œTet â€™68â€• no matter what Cronkite said. Rather, it was lost in the pages of Americaâ€™s newspapers, on our televisions, our college campuses â€” and eventually in the corridors of power in Washington. We need to pray that this war isnâ€™t lost the same way.

Amen, brother, amen!

Category

1. Geo-Political
2. History
3. Marines
4. Military
5. Military History
6. Political

Date Created
October 27, 2006
Author
admin