In Search of the Grand Unified Theory â€“ Part III

Description

Part II is here and covers the finger pointing the first day the â€œissueâ€• with Rep. Mark Foley bubbled to up from beneath the swamp water to see the light of day.

Today, a short post on the topic. I believe I know the end game of the physicists looking for the Grand Unification Theory formula. Once they have discerned it, everything else will be understood exactly how it relates to everything else in the physical science world.

With those seeking the single thing/person/animal/mineral/vegtable that is the cause of all â€œbadnessâ€• in the universe, what next? If â€œitâ€• says â€œsorry!â€• will we then all move along and go back to living? Will we drop the â€œhuntâ€• and be satisfied? Will we secretly break out our notes, hiding under the bedcovers, using a flashlight to illuminate our scribbling and tell ourselves â€œThere must be something ELSE!â€•?

default watermark

How long will it take for â€œgoodnessâ€• to break out on the plant, where all men and women love and respect each other, when no one goes hyngry, when there is nary a molecule of â€œGreenhouseâ€• gas left to cause the inordinate heating of the precious plant? How long, I ask those of you who seek this answer.

I thought of this because of the many, many press conferences when some ~~unbiased, non-glory seeking, bright and intelligent~~ journalists ask President Bush â€œSir, what mistakes have you made in _____?â€• Add to that the many angry editorials where the writers DEMAND the President say he made mistakes.

Ok, so if one day, before his term is over, President Bush says he has committed a specific mistake. Sometimes he does allow for â€œyes, Iâ€™ve made a few mistakesâ€• type of response, but then ignores the clamoring press corps that yells in unison â€œWHAT MISTAKE DID YOU MAKE?â€• as he turns and walks from the podium, waving and smiling. So, pretend President Bush says: â€œI made a mistake counting on the reliability of the intelligence that was provided to me by the CIA.â€•

Will you (you know who you are) then take a deep breath, breathe a sigh of relief and then say to yourself â€œFINALLY!â€• and get on about your life, no longer obsessed with just.getting.HIM.to.say IT?

This, while the topic is not fully explored for the purposes of this series, is the most pressing issue at hand. If we can find who definitively who it is to blame, will we let it go and then do something uplifting and productive for the rest of our days?

Category

1. Humor
2. Political

Date Created

October 11, 2006
Author
admin

default watermark