Am I missing something? Is there a pattern? Yes, there is. Itâ€™s possibly hard to discern, if you donâ€™t lay out the â€œqualityâ€• reporting of the mediaâ€™bâ€™Allah that went along with all of these events. How before the Abu Gharib story broke, there were 24 American deaths a month in all of Iraq, and from that point, the death rate began the increase to what we see today.

I like analogies. I have used then successfully for years in professional and amateur training realms to bring someone quickly to understanding, or into the conversation. Today I introduce the humble ratchet and the governor.

So, here we sit, as the one superpower, able to literally demolish entire small nations within, sayâ€¦28 minutes, struggling with an enemy that is dispersed, not even with a central command and control system, and itâ€™s able to help us exercise a new form of America warfare.

Forget the â€œI was sitting around, minding my own business when you showed up on my doorstep with malice in mind, and Iâ€™m gonna have to beat you silly, drag you out on the street and make you declare to all my friends and neighbors, you are crying â€œUNCLE!â€• and will now do what ever I say. And by the way, once you sign a piece of paper for historical purposes, me and my neighbors will help you become a prosperous nation, living in peaceâ€• method of warfare. I would suggest, the use of the two atomic weapons not only vaporized tens of thousands of our enemy in 1945, it seared our senses, burning an indelible feeling of shame for doing nothing more than responding to the aggressive, act of a sovereign nation against us.

Standby, for there is much to deal with in this veinâ€¦.
