The Next Carrier Class: USS FORD (CVN-78)

Description

Lots of chatter about the net, so I left this alone, as I have posted my thoughts in comment sections.

However..to add some unbearable lightness to the ~~insane~~ naming situation, Rich Casebolt needs to be credited with these brilliant one liners, found in the comments section at Milblogs, on a post by Bublehead:

> I can already hear the commentary about having Ford-class carriers in the fleet â€¦
>
> â€œYou can have it any color, as long as itâ€™s gray â€¦â€•
>
> â€œFix Or Repair Daily â€¦â€•
>
> â€œFound On Rocks, Damaged â€¦â€•
>
> â€œHave you sailed on a Ford, lately?â€•
>
> â€œFord â€¦ a Better Idea?â€•
>
> Would enlisted men on these carriers, who move up to become officers, now be known as Ford Mustangs?
>
> Would the ships of the Battle Groups formed around these carriers now be referred to as Ford Escorts?
>
> Would the Lefties criticize the building of these carriers by referring to them as Ford LTDâ€™s â€" Long Term Debts?
>
> And finally, I now see the truck ads, featuring these carriers behind the truck (or launched off its catapults) to show that the trucks are â€œbuilt Ford tough.â€•

default watermark

If you need more â€œgougeâ€• on the USS FORD, Lexâ€™s post, replete with raging commentary is here, and Bubblehead has the â€œlong formâ€• version here,

Category

1. History
2. Humor
3. Military
4. Navy

Date Created
December 19, 2006
Author

admin

default watermark