Trading Honor for Cold, Hard Cash â€“ BUT WAIT! Thereâ€™s More!

Description

More news on the news of the British sailors and marines:

It seems the head British Military Chaplin thinks the Iranians were quite polite in their handling of the hostages.

From the UK Telegraph:

> Fury as bishops back Iran
> By Jonathan Petre, Religion Correspondent Nicole Martin and Brendan Carlin
>
> he Roman Catholic bishop who oversees the armed forces has provoked fury by praising the Iranian leadership for its â€œforgivenessâ€• and â€œact of mercyâ€• in freeing the 15 British sailors and marines last week.
>
> Bishop of the Forces, the Rt Rev Tom Burns
> Bishop Burns said Iran demonstrated â€˜faith in a forgiving Godâ€™
>
> The Bishop of the Forces, the Rt Rev Tom Burns, said that the religious beliefs of the Iranians had played a large part in their decision to release the hostages after holding them for more than two weeks.
>
> His words were echoed by a leading Anglican figure, the Right Rev Michael Nazir-Ali, the Bishop of Rochester, who said Iran had acted within the â€œmoral and spiritual tradition of their countryâ€• and contrasted this with Britainâ€™s â€œfree-floating attitudesâ€•.
> [â€¦]

default watermark

What has happened to Winston Churchillâ€™s England?

This is beginning to look more like a late night infomercial about Ginzu knifes that an international incident. Now do we just sit back and see the MoDâ€™s version of â€œBritish Sea Service Idol?â€•

Category

1. History
2. Military
3. Political

Date Created
April 9, 2007
Author
admin