Could Pilots be Next on the Hit List?

Description

From the Telegraph in the UK:

Chief scientist in sports cars warning to women:

> Professor Sir David King said governments could only do so much to control greenhouse gas emissions and it was time for a cultural change among the British public.
> advertisement
> And he singled out women who find supercar drivers â€œsexyâ€•, adding that they should divert their affections to men who live more environmentally-friendly lives.
> His comments were greeted with anger by sports car drivers who insisted that their vehiclesâ€™ greenhouse gas emissions were tiny compared with those from four-wheel-drive vehicles.
> Sir David, who is due to retire as the UKâ€™s Chief Scientific Adviser at the end of the year, said individuals needed to change their behaviour.

Iâ€™m guessing the pilots, ESPECIALLY the real go fast guys, who can step it up that one more notch to â€œbusterâ€• speed, will be the next to fall form grace at the green alter of â€œClimate Change.â€• Gotta be lots of â€œbad emissionsâ€• from the raw JP-5 dumping into the afterburner sectionâ€¦

Will pilots have the â€œfortitudeâ€• to stand tall and defend their right to turn a liquid into bone rattling sonic booms?

Ya know, if the women are more concerned about staying cool than dating â€œcool,â€• they might want to heed the messenger!

Good thing Lex already has made his mark on the future of societyâ€¦and needs no more fawning babes at his feet, begging for a â€œTiger Cruiseâ€• of their very own.

On the other handâ€¦think about a world where the Guvâ€™ment tells you who to dateâ€¦You think they blew it with Katrina? Yeah, standby to standby for that disasterâ€¦Yep, we need to tell women how to think, according to Sir King. Will the feminists come out to protest this round of patently obvious misogyny of this line of reasoning?

I think itâ€™s just jealousy hidden behind the current â€œblame allâ€• crisis of the momentâ€¦I bet Sir King never even owned a super carâ€¦.
