How Would You Lend a Hand For Troop Support?

Description

It seems some senior citizens have found a way to help out where they could: Clipping coupons and sending them to families deployed overseas to help stretch their military paychecks:

> Elderly enlist as coupon clippers to aid military
> Small army of old ladies is determined to do its part in the war on terror

> GREENBELT, Md. â€“ Some are frail, their bodies riddled with arthritis. Others are confined to walkers or wheelchairs.
> Spread out across the country is a small army of old ladies determined to do their part in the war on terror. Their weapons of choice: scissors and coupons.
> They cut out a couple hundred each day, a few thousand a week, and send them to military families in the Middle East and elsewhere overseas, who redeem them at commissaries. It may not seem like much, the ladies say, but every little bit counts.

Ingenious and very helpful. BZ to these women who would devote their time to save money, and a BZ to the Washington Post for highlighting this work done by these women.
