For Your Friday Reading

Description

Staff Sergeant Matthew Maupinâ€™s remains are coming home to Cincinnatiâ€™s Lunken Airport on Saturday, April 26th. The Critical Hour blog has a request for those wishing to honor Matt to line the route to the Union Township Civic Center holding lighted candles. SSGT Maupin was the soldier captured in Iraq in 2004 and was recently found dead. Details of the route for tomorrow, Saturday 4/26/2008 are here. A condolence page to leave a note to Mattâ€™s parents is also available.

SteelJaw Scribe reminds us of the final airlift out of Vietnam in 1975: Operation Frequent Wind in his ongoing excellent â€œFlight Deck Fridayâ€• series.

CDR Salamanderâ€™s â€œFullbore Fridayâ€• chronicles reminds of how one man from Hollywood served his nation well crossing the beaches at Normandy on day one and then further into Europe. The man is Charles Durning.

default watermark

â€œRounds Out!â€• on Townhall reminds of â€œClimate Changeâ€• with a painting depicting a cooler time in history.

Yid with a Lid presents the speech BhO might have given, had he been at the Reed Sea when Moses parted the waters en route the Promised Land.

Category

1. Science

Date Created
April 25, 2008
Author
admin