And the Survey Saysâ€¦

Description

< (Click the pic for the details)

default watermark

Itâ€™s been a bit of a haul, and itâ€™s definitely been the result of a large community helping to send traffic my way.

Fitting the hit came from Edinburgh, Scotland, and from the really, really large website, gCaptainâ€™s blog . Got my â€œSWO sweaterâ€• from there, thanks to the HC-6 Helo Det OIC buying some Royal Navy ones, made from real wool, from the RN guys at the base in Roysyth, while on the trip to the North Atlantic for Silver Jubilee.

The price was a huge $14â€¦and only a few of us too the OIC up on it, and when he got stateside a few weeks later, and sold them to his squadron mates for $50.

Stil have the non-USN SWO Sweater in the closet. Never had the velcro patch for the nametag, but, I had mine before the USN decided the SWOs could have something special, which they then took away and made them Navy wide. I wore it many a cold night on the bridge watches, and in CICs on several ships as well, since the equipment had to stay chilled in thereâ€¦to heck with human comfort! And then there was the time the MCPON decided we had to wear your collar tips out because an SA complained to him about how the tips in irritated his neckâ€¦.

So, here I am at at least a significant milestone for to show for doing this across three blogging platforms and over 1200 posts.

Iâ€™m grateful for all the incoming links and thankful for all the wonderful people Iâ€™ve come to know in real life and virtually.

Category

1. Blogging

Tags

1. 100000 hits
2. Blogging

3. sitemeter

Date Created
April 29, 2009
Author
admin

default watermark