

Maybe We Need National Elections for Congress

Description

I'm getting confused; it seems the Congress of this United States is spending an inordinate amount of time micromanaging our warfighting.

- 1) They are not the Commander-in-Chief. The Constitution gave that job to the President.
- 2) But they are Democrats (for the most part who are doping this and not the business of the nation) and maybe they are just following in the footsteps of LBJ and Jimmy Carter by mucking with military operations at a detailed level.

I was thinking, since we pay the Congress out of Federal funds, and they like to tinker in the affairs of national security, maybe they all need to get the big thumbs up (or down) from all of the voters, so we citizens might have a say in who runs the nation's foreign affairs.

Still just wondering why I have to pay them, but they'd toss my letter/email/phone call to all but a few of their offices, since I'm not in their district.

Tracked back at:
Third World County

Category

1. Political

Date Created

January 19, 2007

Author

admin